English Outline Planned

A new course of study in English will be developed for seventh and eighth grade students this summer. Culminating a year-long study of the upper-grade English curriculum, a committee of English teachers will meet for six weeks this summer to draw up a new guide for teaching English in the departmentalized program in Torrance schools. The committee will be comprised of six upper-grade English teachers, four high school English teachers, two elementary school principals, and a curriculum consultant. During the summer workshop, committee members will review new research in English education and identify the major areas of English curriculum to be emphasized. A course outline will be prepared, emphasizing most successful methods of teaching grammar, spelling, composition, rhetoric, and literature. New text materials which will reinforce the new English curriculum will be recommended.

The bell was hung 36 years after the midnight ride of Paul Revere.
